THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

The election is over, the die is cast, the country has spoken. The majority have given the verdict, the minority bows and humbly awaits and firmly hopes—that it prophesied would come to pass if the opposition got into power may never come to pass. A great institution is that vote, and we think a great deal of it, as we should.

The great Laurier has done great work, and undoubtedly thought he was adding a crown to his life's work in bringing forward this reciprocity pact. He did well to put the question to the people, that great arbiter, and though they voted against it they will not grudge the great leader his mead of praise for the work he has done for this great country.

A new leader comes upon the scene. He has a stupendous task before him; not the least is that of choosing his co-workers, the cabinet. May the highest wisdom be granted to him. He will not forget the interests of this great West. Will the country go to the dogs now? Do you think it possible that a country such as this, which is the envy of the world, with such vast possibilities, with such stupendous resources, with so many millions of acres of fertile virgin soil, will do anything else but go right ahead?

Will emigration cease? Not for a moment. While there are nations with surplus populations, while there are young men with ambition, while there are farmers who know the value, the true value of soil, good soil, emigration will not cease, it will increase in greater volume than ever.

Now the conflict is over, now all the bad words have been spoken, let us hope our Canada will settle down to the real business of living. Yes, let us live the best we know how. Let us give our legislators to understand that we want honesty in high places, and that what they have condemned in others they will refrain from doing themselves. Our legislators need to have vision, they need to see the possibilities of this great country and they need to legislate for its highest interests. It is sometimes needful that we, the people, remind our representatives of these things. Then, while they are working for the interests of the country at large, let us work for our individual communities and measure up to the responsibilities devolving upon us.

SOCIALISM

There are many ideas of Socialism, but a certain writer gives the following, on which he believes socialists are in very general agreement:

1. The equal right of every human being to the resources of nature as our common heritage.

2. Our right to the socially necessary tools of production and distribution, both by reason of our part in their creation and as our heritage from the genius and labor of generations of workers of the past.

3. Our right to the systematic co-ordination of our labor with the labor of our fellows, each to receive of the multiplied product of this perfected industrial order in proportion to the service rendered. Socialists hold that just as through the substitution of public ownership of law and government, or political democracy, we have escaped the tyranny of privately owned law and government imposed by the decree of a king, so also must we escape industrial despotism by substituting for private ownership of industry industrial democracy, or collective ownership of industry; in short, socialize industry just as we have socialized government.

To accomplish this it will be necessary to show the working class the fact and method of its exploitation, so that the workers may become conscious of the conflict of interest between capitalists and non-capitalists, and also conscious of the necessity for a separate political party through which they may inaugurate the co-operative commonwealth in which industrial class divisions, poverty, and strife shall give way to fraternity, abundance, and universal peace.

This is a large order surely. We cannot help but admire the ideas, but we think they will come—if they ever come into practice—by slow degrees. And after all that is the better way.

THE MANLY ART (?)

Johnson, the Negro, and Bombardier Wells, a white man, were billed to fight at Earl's Court, London, Eng. Ministers of many churches, however, have been speaking against the meeting of these two men, and it seems as though the fight will be called off. Why cannot two men beat and bruise and demoralize each other if they choose? Somebody asks. For one reason, just because it does not end there. The demoralization extends to the thousands who witness the orgy, and then, for the purpose of making money, moving picture scenes of the brutal business are shown all around the world, and thus the evils are increased in an unlimited manner.

Just another reason: The fight between a black and a white man is sure to arouse racial feelings. England embraces millions of black-skinned men within her government, and such a fight would do incalculable harm if England allowed it within her borders.

But here is still another reason. The whole prize fighting business is a beastly business that civilized men should rule out of their list of sports entirely. Just look at the following paragraphs from the sporting column of a daily paper: "Fireman Flynn put it all over Carl Morris, 'white man's hope.' All through the fight Morris kept using his great weight and strength to weaken Flynn, but the latter invariably had the better of the close work. His left hooks and jabs soon set the blood flying, and at all times he was willing to take punishment in order to send back worse than he received.

"It was the bloodiest fight seen in this city (New York), and many of the spectators around the ring were astonished at the stamina of both men, which carried them at a fast pace through the half score of rounds.

"Senator Frawley and a party of friends, during the seventh round shouted, Stop it! Stop it!

"Round 2—They went to close quarters at once, with Flynn upcutting with lefts on body

Sound Advice

FARMER—Well wife, the barn wants painting, the fence is down, the chickens are in the garden, the doors are off the granary, the pump's no good, we haven't a knife that we can cut the meat, the licothem is full of holes, the house is swarming with flies, the chickens are covered with lice, we haven't got a decent chair to sit on, the buggy squeaks worse than a German band, the cows swallowed the wire stretchers, and the pig eat the hammer. I think we'll quit farming.

WIFE—Let us go and see McMeekin & Scragg and get the place fixed up. We're going to have a good crop this year, and I know the boys will treat us right.

Presbyterian Harvest Home on Thanksgiving Day

Mrs. Johnson of Berlin, Ont., is visiting Mrs. H. C. George.

The annual Children's Day services take place in the Presbyterian Hall next Sunday morning. This is an opportunity for the little ones to learn that they have a recognized place in the church. The whole service centres on Christ's most winning words, "Come unto Me." In the evening the sermon subject will be "The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper." These services will both be preparatory to the celebration of the Lord's Supper on the morning of Oct. 8th.

Rally Day in the Methodist Church

The rally day in the Methodist church last Sunday was full of pleasing incident and profit. It took the form of a commemorative service in honor of the illustrious founder of the modern organized Sunday school, Robert Raikes, who died 100 years ago. The service was filled to the doors, the children being arranged and seated on the choir rostrum. The programme consisted of an eight-page cantata, containing well known hymns, responsive reading by the superintendent, teachers and scholars, and three hymns set to special music, with an address on "Robert Raikes, the man and his work," by the pastor, the Rev. O. E. Mann; Mr. J. W. Bradley, superintendent of the Sunday school, led in the responsive readings. The children did remarkably well, the singing being especially good. The service was much enjoyed by all present, and was one that will not be soon forgotten.

THE COAL STRIKE

The weather last week was a lively reminder to a very large number of people that the coal strike is still unsettled. It is anything but a cheering prospect that faces the householders, as he looks at his empty coal bin, not knowing when he will be able to get even a lb. of coal to fill up that vacant space. Perhaps now the election is over the new government may be able to find time to attend to such a little trifling thing as this coal strike, and devise some means of bringing it to a speedy end; or, at least, provide ample protection to those miners who are willing to work, but are intimidated by hostile miners and union agitators. In the meantime, the householders and his wife and children will have the privilege of suffering from cold and frost. Unless something is done pretty soon to supply the public with coal there will be little short of a revolution. Whatever the outcome may be it can be taken for granted that the consumer will have to pay the piper. Already coal prices are soaring and what the consumer will have to pay later on will considerably lessen his banking account before the winter is through. But at whatever price we have to have the coal—if we can get it.

Bliz Shortage in Twine

The famine in binder twine has become very acute in the Cayley district. All the dealers have been sold out some time ago, and there is not a pound in sight to supply the crying demand, so great is the bumper crop. It is estimated that some thousands of pounds will yet be required to fill the orders already on hand. Many are telegraphing to Calgary and Winnipeg, and even Timothy Eaton's stock has been exhausted. The scarcity is due to the crops being so much heavier than was anticipated. In some fields five pounds of twine per acre is required to bind the crops, whereas two and a half pounds has been the average.

Wholesale dealers and manufacturers have alike been caught and the situation has become serious.

Some of the dealers blame the farmers for not putting in their orders earlier, and the farmers, on the other hand, say that they could not be expected to order a lot of twine in advance, before they knew what their crop was going to be. Fortunately, however, some of our farmers ordered what they at first thought would be more than they needed for this year's crop, but which has proved to be a lucky speculation, as they have now just enough only to do them this season.

Binder twine is a cash article from the wholesalers and will not stand storage from one year to the next. Between these two aspects of the case it can be seen that neither party is really to blame. It is the unexpectedly heavy crop which has brought this state of things to pass.

There is now no time to bring on twine from the factories in the east. It may be necessary to cut some of the grain without binding it, tying it up by hand in the old fashioned way. This would entail an immense amount of labor, but otherwise the crop would be lost.

Discouraged Mothers

It is when William is 12 and Mildred 14 that their mother begins to face her real problem. Before that they have been little folks, her babies, or, at the worst, two somewhat tempestuous youngsters to be dealt with radically when they were inubordinate.

But the boy of 12 and the girl of 14 comes to the parting of the ways. They develop personalities, individualities, which refuse to be ignored.

"I wish my babies were still little," a harassed mother said the other day. "Then I knew where they were and what they were thinking. Now I am kept wondering about them half the time, and I feel as if my hair was turning white with anxiety."

Another woman says: "I thought I had problems when Frederick and Kathleen were kiddies, but now it seems as if all my training had made no impression."

It is not only the problems, but the lack of love and of interest which makes many a mother heavy. Hitherto she has been the most important feature in the life of her children. Pinnas with father and mother, or play with mother and mother, were once looked forward to as the consummation of all desire, but now the boys and girls are the "whole thing." Older people seem to occupy a sphere absolutely separate from the juvenile world in which they dwell. They take mothers and fathers and grandmothers and aunts and uncles into consideration only as they minister to their needs.
